Impact of research outside academia

My research on distributive ethics led to an appointment as a member of the WHO's Consultative Group on Equity and Universal Health Coverage (2012-2014). The group produced a report, Making Fair Choices on the Path to Universal Health Coverage, in 2014, which cites some of this research. This report has been endorsed by the Director-General of the WHO in a publication in Health Systems and Reform. It has been presented at the WHO; the Pan-American Health Organization (PAHO); the Global Summit of National Bioethics Committees; the World Congress on Bioethics; public health bodies in Chile, Colombia, Ethiopia, and the Netherlands; and many universities. It influenced an advisory report to the Norwegian government: Open and Fair: Priorities in Health. It also influenced the Ethiopian government's decision to set up a Center for Medical Ethics and Priority-Setting at Addis Ababa university and to invite members of the Consultative Group to provide training there and at universities around the country. As a follow up to the Report, some members of the Working Group teamed up with civil servants in Ministries of Health and several international organizations to write a collection of case studies in priority-setting in health. I am the lead author of these studies, some of which are forthcoming in Health and Human Rights Journal, and others of which are under review.
